April Showers Bring May Flowers - and Possibly Power Outages! How Can You Prepare Ahead of Time?

You never know when inclement weather, accidents, or grid strain could cause a power outage in your area. Take these simple steps to make sure your home and family are ready for whatever is thrown your way!

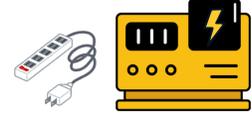

Build an Emergency Kit

Start with essentials like flashlights for each family member, extra batteries, a battery-powered radio, bottled water, etc. Keep everything in one easy-to-access location so you're not scrambling in the dark during the outage.

Charge Mobile Devices

Without electric, you won't be able to use home phones or charge mobile devices. Battery backups can be purchased from local retailers and allow temporary use of home phones during outages. If you don't have a home phone or battery backup, you should keep devices and portable chargers (power banks) fully charged.

Have a Plan

Using surge protectors on electronics like TVs, computers, and routers can protect your equipment when power is restored. A portable generator can also provide peace of mind (operate outdoors and away from windows).

SEI's Nationwide Cellular
